Background

Oxfam is currently undergoing a period of transformational change that envisions a future where they are a more interdependent network, driven by knowledge, organized for more simplicity and more balanced globally. Oxfam strives to have affiliates in southern countries that can raise their own funds, run their own programs, make their own alliances with local people's movements, and lobby their own governments and businesses.

In the coming decade, Asia will continue to be an active player driving poverty reduction, expanding its middle class, propelling urbanization and intra-regional migration, increasing access to education and communications technologies, swelling consumption, and reconfiguring demographics. However, at the same time, inequality between the ultra-rich and those living in poverty continues to grow.

The most rapid growth of the middle class will occur in Asia, with China and India largely driving poverty reduction. Economic opportunities in an increasingly-urban population expands the urban-rural development gap, increases pressure on provision of essential and basic services and onto urban governance systems and their ability to maintain peace and political stability.

In this context, Oxfam in Asia needs to adapt and change and become fit for purpose to realise its vision of empowering people living in poverty to fight for their rights to a better world. Vision 2020, Oxfam's strategy for internal change, will create a sustainable and accountable Oxfam that has one vision, one voice and one shared plan. The aim is to create a stronger Oxfam in Asia and globally, one that is coordinated and relevant in every country in which they work.

In order to help drive and deliver this ambitious vision in Asia, Oxfam needs an outstanding and distinctive Regional Director. This leader will be able to apply leadership, management and coordination skills in a network setting, a multi-cultural worldview and understand the opportunities and challenges that come from working in a global organization. Fluency in English is essential.
